A FORMULA WANTED.

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sis-ers: I had no idea, when in a recent etter, I drew a parallel between a wish and a prayer, that the question would be productive of so many favor-able comments from the Social Corner writers, and I am glad to note their vriting recipes and remedies it may be timely to suggest that some of us may be capable of devising o for-mula from which we can accurately report and quote one another and also. hatever we may see in print. For istance: Two persons casually meet nd interchange a few remarks concerning a third party. Sub-requently one of these talkers whose propensity for repeating conversations is greater than his judgment, imad-centently, or otherwise, quotes, or rather misquotes, some statement which the quoter, in all probability, made himself and perhaps got an acquiescent nod from his listener.

Usually these quotations gather further distortions from gossips and ultimately drift to the ears of the said third party, which oftentimes causes dissensions and estrangements. In fact they have led to fatal results—even to feuds and wars. misquotes - some states FAVORITE RECIPES FROM AUNT

An Actual Experience

It was a tired mother who had put the misplaced chair back so many times she finally insisted on the little two years old girl doing it, and her opposition caused a half hour's seige, a struggle for obedience, during which alternated commands, slaps and refusals to obey. The mother gained her point only by taking the child's hand and holding it upon the chair with the occasion, though sometimes it would be a long time before the little do occasion, though sometimes it would be a long time before the little do occasion, though sometimes it would be a long time before the little do occasion, though sometimes it would be a long time before the little do occasion, though sometimes it would be a long time before the little do occasion, though sometimes it would be a long time before the little do occasion, though sometimes it would be a long time before the little do occasion, though sometimes it would be a long time before the little do occasion, though sometimes it would be a long time before the little do occasion, though sometimes it would be a long time before the little do occasion, though sometimes it would be a long time before the little occasion, though sometimes it would be a long time before the little do occasion, though sometimes it would be a long time before the little occasion, though sometimes it would be a long time before the little occasion, though sometimes it would be a long time before the little occasion, though sometimes it would be a long time before the little one could be won, patience was always rewarded with the same pleasing result. Dear Sisters of the Social Corner: low do you all enjoy this beautiful

Here is a little article that may interest many of our readers: The Mike apple is a queer species of The Mike apple is a queer species of Connecticut fruit, with a strange history. It is now in some of the neighboring markets. It has a fair skin, an excellent flavor and is extensively propagated hereabouts. Each individual apple exhibits somewhere in its pulp a red speck like a tinge of fresh blood, and thereby hangs a strange legend.

blood, and thereby bangs a strange legend.

The apple obtains its name from Micah Rood, a farmer who lived upon the outlands of the Connecticut town in the 18th century. The son of Thomas Rood, one of Norwich's early settlers, Micah tilled his fertile acris with all the zeal of youthful ambition; but of a sudden his habits changed; he grew idle, restless and intemperate. He lost all interest in both work and worship, His cattle were neglected and worship. His cattle were neglected and his neighbors shunned. Some attributed this change to

If a load of crime rested upon the conscience of the suspected farmer, it never forced a confession from his lips. His farm drifted gradually to decay and, too broken down to reclaim it, he wandered about town, disordered in mind and body. He died in 1728, but while the blood-spotted apple continues to grow his name and history will be perpetuated.

Hang the garment in the house in cold weather, for differences in temperature cause wool to shrink. When the garment is thoroughly dry, hans out of doors to air.

Worden dress goods can be washed successfully by using soap bark, but unless the goods are well dyed they will run and fade.

A new way of bleaching is to hang the articles on the line and with a garden hose wet as often as they dry. I find it very good and not nearly as tiresome as laying the clothes on the grass.

I also wash a quilt with the hose. Hang it up dry on the line and thoroughly wet with hose. The rub the soiled places with soap and rinse with hose. If you choose a snappy, windy day, your quilt will be dry by night.
